BARNUM TO BUSINESS MEN.—The great showman knows the value of advertising from experience.
Lately, in a lecture at Bull's Opera House, Middletown, N. Y., he said: "In order to do business successfully you must advertise. That will get you patrons. Then satisfy your customers, and they will become walking advertisements for you. It will not do to stick out a little sign, and then take it in again. A man who had not succeeded in advertising, said to him, 'Why, I did it I did advertise!
I put an advertisement in twice and it cost me three dollars, but it did not seem to make any difference.' 'My friend,' said Barnum, 'people don't read an advertisement the first time. Hammer away on that nail until you have clinched it.' If a man advertises fifteen times and has not the foresight or courage to do it the sixteenth, it will do him little if any good. Keep doing it! A half dose of medicine only makes you quailish, and does you no good. Take a whole dose. Advertise! and sell your goods, or the Sheriff will advertise and do it for you."

A PICTURE FROM PARIS.—Galignani, of March 31, says: "The law courts and tribunals have been, in a lecture at Bull's Opera House, Middletown, N. Y., he said: "In order to do business
it in again. A man who had not succeeded in advertising, said to him, 'Why, I did it I did advertise!
I put an advertisement in twice and it cost me
three dollars, but it did not seem to make any differ-

man advertises fifteen times and has not the foresight or courage to do it the sixteenth, it will do
of medicine only makes you quailish, and does you

The most notable incident of Father Taylor's funeral was a woman, with her poor, soiled dress, and her basket of oranges and apples on her arm, walking up the aisle in the midst of the services, looking into his face, and going out, paying no attention to the audience or the execution of the service. It was a contemporary, such a gesture of independence and characterization, that it seemed as if Father Taylor would almost himself rise and commend it.

UTAH MINES.—Since the Gentiles got a foothold on Mormon soil Utah has been developing into one of the richest mining regions on the continent.
There are fabulously rich mines in the mountains, about there, and new discoveries are almost daily being made.
